

David Watt, Executive Director of the Institute of Directors (IoD) Scotland submitted the following comment to the Sunday Herald following Scottish Enterprise announcing plans to shed a quarter of its senior staff to lower annual payroll costs by £2 million. (11th July 2010)

He said: The organisation has been top-heavy for a long time and these changes are long overdue. I think they should be thinking about reducing their senior staff levels even further as most businesses have significantly flattened their management structures. I am concerned about these levels of compensation.”
